The Kitakyushu Manga Museum is like a shrine to manga enthusiasts as it houses a whopping 50,000 volumes of manga! Feel free to read these printed artworks, or learn more about the history and culture of manga through learning games. The museum has a focus on manga artists with effusions to the city including Laili Matsumoto, creator of Space Battleship Yamato and Galaxy Express 999. The museum is in AnuAra City, a mall devoted to Japanese pop culture!

Sado City, Niigata Prefecture
Fans of Ghibli's "Spirited Away" will immediately recognize the torii shrine in a heartbeat! In the film, it was used to transport Chihiro to the partially-submerged train station, and now you too can experience riding in one when visiting Sado Island. Originally used by the renowned Ama divers for catching abalone and mollusks in the rocky coastal areas, the torii shrine are now available for visitors who want to experience travelling in a unique tub-shaped boat, piloted by a skilled skipper.

Lake Akan, Kushiro City, Hokkaido
Sitting near Akanko Onsen is Lake Akan Ainu Theater, Japan's first theatre dedicated to indigenous Ainu culture. Fans of the anime "Golden Kamuy" will know that a "kamuy" is a spiritual being in Ainu mythology. In the series, the Ainu huntress named Asuka always honors her prey and everything she uses as gifts from the kamuy. At the Ainu Theater, you'll get to witness Ainu culture with mouth-harp music, ceremonial dances, puppet shows, and dramatic state-of-the-art performances.

Join us on our SNS campaign, which has already started and will last until 11th August this year!

Under the current circumstances where physical tourism is restricted, we are starting a SNS campaign that will bridge the physical distance between residents in Singapore and Japan. You can participate by simply sharing your recommended attractions in Singapore (or even Japan!) on Instagram and hashtag #SUSOGG for photos taken in Singapore or #SUSJP for photos taken in Japan. Participants will also stand a chance to win a wonderful prize in the lucky draw!

Do find out more about our SNS campaign on the website below!
